LaserWriter Pro 810: Startup Page and Printer Name (4/94)

Article Created: 14 April 1994

TOPIC -----

The startup page doesn't reflect the correct printer name. The printer has been named LW Pro Room 218, the test page says LW Pro 810f. If I check the name with the LW Utility it shows the correct name. The correct name also appears in the Chooser of all Macintosh computers. The correct name was on the test page but we had big problems with the printer and had to reset it to factory defaults. Since then I cannot get the test page to show the correct printer name. How can I force the printer to print the correct name on the test page?

DISCUSSION -----

The start up page reflects the name assigned to the LocalTalk side of the printer. Due to the I/O architecture of this printer it was not possible to set the LocalTalk name from the EtherTalk side and vice versa. To have the start up page reflect the correct name simply connect to the printer with LocalTalk and use the LaserWriter Utility to rename it.
